THE HAVAL MUTINY. Eighteenth Century Discipline.

The marvel to me is, not that the stokers have broken out at Portsmouth, but that the lower deck has not broken out before. Do not misunderstand. I would shoot or cut down mutineers as freely and gaily asanyone, but when you have shot them down, and "order rolgns in Warsaw," the question is asked and must be answered-Why did those men break windows, disobey orders, and make fools of themselves, like

Russian seris on the rampage? I have said that the mutiny is no surprise to me. In my book "Nelson and the Twentieth Century," in the chapter on Discipline, a forecast was made of the breakdown of the present system. Discipline exists not for a martinet or a system, but for the nation, and the nation wants discipline not for the arbitrary pleasure of a jack-in-office, but in order that battle shall find ships' crews organised for concerted action. Absence of discipline means a-shambles on board every ship of war. As to the need for discipline, therefore there is no room for two opinions. But in long peace between Trafalgar and Tsushimathere has sprung up a cluster of cankersfungi on the body of discipline. Just asreligion deteriorates into ritual, discipline in the Navy has degraded into trivialites of uniform and convention, that have no more to do with fighting efficiency than kneeling with faith in the unseen God. The consequence of the devotion to form is the sacrifice of the spirt of discipline, and the upgrowth of a revolt against outrages to the manbood and dignity of English fight-

In order to understand the bearing of discipline upon modern fighting forces, we must penetrate to the bottom of the present ROGER 3 Stars, 100 cases SCOTCH WHISKY; system. In the olden days, before Bonaparte, fighting by land and sea was the function or profession of soldiers and Bailors. "Once a sailor always a sailor"or soldier-as a rule! Professional navies and armies were the instruments of 2427 dynastics who fought for succession or for creeds. When the French nation rose enmasse against an untaxed nobility and a. corrupt Church, France was invaded by the professional troops of the European. coalition. Bonaparte with his genius organised the poor gentlemen and the restof the nation, and, although he did not. understand sea power, he did revolutionise

The revolution was not effected in alight, but all the great nations have accepted the rules laid down by Bonaparte and sanctioned by Schnadhorst, Nelson, Von Clausevitz, and Von Moltke for the conduct of war. Modern warfare is the relentless exercise of a force under jungle conditions an armed nation against an armed nation. Every Power in Europe has accepted these conditions except England. The discipline of the British Navy and Army is substantially the discipline that existed in the eighteenth century, when the navy was the instrument of King and Cabinet. The only possible occasion when the British Navy can be called upon to fight for the life of the nation is when every family in the three kingdoms is directly interested in the success of British arms. The logical consequence of this position is that the discipline of the Navy shall recognise the manhood, the self-respect, and even the dignity of the bluejackets and stokers who elemente; the material including tonnage and gunnery; the intellectual, including. the admiral's skill and the brains of the officer of the watch, the petty officer, and the man who beaves the lead or trains the gun; and the epiritual, the element that does not lend itself to statistics. The spiritual element in war is willinguess to die, the desire for victory, the readiness for sacrifice, the hope of glory. These things are not obtainable from serie. The story of Rozhdestvensky's voyage from Libau to Taushima reveals a liberal measure of compulsion on all hands, and foretells dramatioslly the gruesome result in the fighting line in the Sea of Japan.

It stands to resson that, if the British Navy in the dread hour of battle is to do better than the miserable story told by Engineer Politovsky, every stoker and bluejacket must be an assenting as well as an obedient instrument of his commander's will. This position may be made clearer by a concise description of what takes place in the firing of a 12in., or even a 6in.

1981 are required to do the spade work of war. Fighting efficiency is composed of thres

ing men.

A successful shot from a turret gun in the British Navy means the intense and synchronous action of sixty-three in separated by steel compartments and acting updge conditions of abnormal difficulty and discomfort.

12in. turret does not act together hy compulsion or the fear of punishment, or by the desire to excel. None of the recent records made in the Channel and Mediterranean Fleets have been achieved by eighteenth-century methods. They are the result of the commanding personality of capable officers and petty officers, who recognise in their subordinates fellow men, colleagues, helpers, and comrades, rather than underlings to be coerced, or sorfs to be punished.

The point that I want to make about the Portsmouth disorder is that the whole system of discipline in the Navy and Army requires revision. For the same reason that the "Dreadnought" was created, a new condition of things has come into existence, Lieutenant Collard-may, or may not, have been to blame, but whether he was or not, the barst up of the present system is inevitable, and the principle adopted by the Japanese in their code of discipline is essential if England is to remain a maritime Power.

The Admiralty are not to blame. It was impossible to effect drastic reform in naval discipline until a dramatic event had attracted public attention to the fact that we were not living in the eighteenth century. Now that public attention has been called to the fact, pseudo-discipline will be, abolished, unless Britain is to sink to the level of Babylon and Tyre, ARNOLD WHITE in the Daily Chronicle.

GOVERNOR HEAD AND THE CANDIDATE.

When Governor Head Iwas in office in New Hampshire, Colonel Barrett, an estimable member of the Governor's staff, died, and there was an unseemly scramble of would-be succesors for the office, even while his body was awaiting burial with military honours.

One candidate, somewhat bolder than the rest, ventured to call upon Governor Head, thinking to ascertain the beat of the Governor's mind upon the important question.

"Governor," he asked, "not to speak in a manner too positive, do you think you would have any objections if I was to get into Colonel Barrett's place ?"

The answer came promptly: "No, I don't think I should have any objections, if the undertaker is willing,"

(From Our Correspondent.)

AROY, Dec. 17. We have recently had a visit from the German warship "First Riemarck," and Kulangau has been inucdated with crowds of sailors from her. There are two things that strike one about these men. The first is the fine clothes in which they are all dragged. The cloth of which their suits are made seems too good for seamen, and more suited for petty officers or even men above the rank of these. The German Government has evidently determined that when their men land they shall not reflect disgrace upon the mother country. The Tamar kicked off, but play was rather next is the orderly behaviour of all as they slow for the first couple of minutes, a good walk the streets. One would almost think deal of hard and high kicking being they were all going to church, so solemn indulged in. By the new steamers Rhengnia, Habsburg and Hohenslaufen. These steamers offer to the public the highest comfort yet attained in ocean travelling. They are especially built for the tropics with very large well ventilated cabins, amidship, lighted throughout by electricity, face provided in each cabin. The berths are not arranged one above the other as it has been the fashion hitherto, but the staterooms closely resemble ordinary sleeping rooms on shore, the bertha standing like beds at either side of the cabins. As a novelty, a number of cabins are: provided for single passengers, These steamers call at Naples & Plymouth. In addition to the above steamers, the s.s. BALLADS.

Where gaunt and leafted prend the trees. And grim the rugged mountains hear. No juyous springs the flowers restore : The misty sir is dank and cold : The winds seem sighing ! Nevermore, Within the land of Growing Old." There hands are folded on the knees, There-hearts are withered to the core den slowly sip life's muddy leas, The while the hearse waits at the door, God knows if they the fates implore, To give them back the years of gold Or pray that life may soon be o'er. Within the land of Growing Old.

In little groups of two and trees. They disappear, and none deplore But ever steady blows the brecke, That walts folk to that disms shore. for one that goes there cometh four. To wait their turn to fat the mould And many a heart is aick and sore, Within the land of Growing Old.

Dear, add unto our accret ators One more caress, and love grow cold L hear the sad, slow surges pour Upon the land of Growing Old.

ANOTHER PRINCELY ROMANCE.

Engaged to a Mayor's Daughter.

BERLIN, Nov. 12. Another royal remance has caused quite. flutter in the highest circles of German

The hero of this romance is the Hereditary Prince Eberwyn of Bentheim-Steinfurt, and the heroine Fraulein Fanny Koch, the daughter of the mayor of a FIXED DEPOSIT at & PER OR IT. per small German provincial town. Her annum. father, Herr Koch, before attaining to the eminence of mayoralty, was a tradesman who kept a general store.

The family of Bentheim-Steinfurt is one. of those mediatised royal dynasties whose members possess; for all time, absolute equality of birth with members of the VOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, 1932 reigning royal houses. The members of he princely house of Bentheim-Steinfurt are governed by so-called house laws, which, among other things, prohibit them marrying persons beneath them in rank. Those princes or princesses of the Bentheim dynasty who transgress this family statute forfeit all their royal privileges and lose their royal rank.

The Hereditary Prince Eberwyn has expressed his determination to make this Lorpos. great sacrifice in order to marry a girl of humble birth whom he loves. Fraulein Koch, as soon as she became engaged, Post Astrus. Cherco. informed her father of the Prince's deter. OBAKA. mination to marry her. The Prince's father and all his relatives and friends did their utmost to persuade him from this step, but their entreaties, their warnings, and their arguments alike failed to shake his resolution. Finally, Prince Alexis informed his son that he must renounce his birthright before marrying a tradesman's daughter. Prince Eberwyn thereupon formally renounced his birthright in the presence of a general family council, and took a solemn oath never to dispute the right of his younger brother, Prince Victor Adolphus, to take his place as Hereditary Prince; and ultimately as head of the family. Simul taneously, Prince Eberwyn was compelled to leave the army. Prince Eberwyn has been hitherto the officer of a crack regiment of cavalry. Apart from the loss of his birthright and military rank, he sacrifices the right of succession to property comprising many thousands of acres and an annual income estimated at a quarter of a million sterling. The wedding takes place next week. The Prince is 24 years of age, and Fraulein Koch, for whom he is sacrificing so much, is a year older;

BISMARCK'S THREE

Bismarck, writes a correspondent to Home paper, held with Pythagoras, that. not thirteen but three was the great and perfect number. Biemarck's associations with three were remarkable. He had served three masters. He had three names; Bismarck, Schoonhauson, and Lauenburg. The arms of his family are a clover leaf and three oak leaves. He was concerned in three wars, and signed three treaties of resco. In the Franco-Prussian war he had three horses killed under him. He brought about the meeting of three Emperors, and was responsible for the Triple Alliance. He had three children; his family motto was Vasza, etc., etc. In Trinitate Robur (Strength in Trinity) and contemporary caricature pictured him with three hairs on his head. Three was the beginning, the middle, and the and of Bismarck.
